The Property

Hele Valley Woodland (lot 1) extends to approximately 16.24 acres in total and comprises an attractive parcel of young broadleaf woodland, a dedicated parking area, as well as a small parcel of land situated immediately north of the parking area. Throughout the woodland are several well-established paths and walking routes. The main access to the woodland is from the eastern end, directly from Pinch Hill via an established gateway which in turn leads to the hardcore parking area. Lot 1 also benefits from additional access from the western boundary.

The woodland is part of the Hele Valley Trail and was established with the help and support of a number of local organisations and government organisations, as noted on various signposts and information boards which are located around the site. Lot 2 measures approximately 9.21 acres and consists of two level riverside pasture fields as well as a small copse of mature poplar trees to the south-west. Lot 2 shares the access from the eastern end of lot 1 over the parking area.

Location

The land is situated on the outskirts of the attractive village of Marhamchurch and lies approximately 1.5 miles south of the seaside town of Bude which offers a range of amenities. The land could be used as a base from which to explore all the North Cornish Coast has to offer, including its beaches, coastal walks and trails which enable easy access to the National Cycle Network. The A39 'Atlantic Highway' is less than half a mile away and provides a great access link south leading further down into Cornwall and north leading out of Cornwall and into Devon.
